

Dr Emma Astwood is a paediatric haematologist based in Sheffield and am involved in the care of children with all haematological disorders across Sheffield, South Yorkshire and the Humber region. I am the trust lead for transfusion medicine and clinical lead for the haematology laboratory at Sheffield Children's Hospital NHS Foundation Trust. I am the regional lead for haemoglobinopathies and rare anaemia care for paediatric services and the paediatric lead for the North East and Yorkshire Haemoglobinopathy Coordinating Centre. I have recently been appointed a member of the National Haemoglobinopathy Panel and look forward to supporting this development over the coming years.