

Heather Newell has worked in Haemoglobinopathies for over 20 years primarily in the paediatric setting. Currently working as Lead Nurse in Paediatric Haematology at Barts Health. My first interest in sickle cell began in 1996 after receiving a nursing fellowship to attend the sickle cell clinic in Jamaica; in 1998 I completed a BSc (hons). Further obtaining an MSc in 2006. I have contributed extensively to the development of Haemoglobinopathy services both locally and nationally. Most importantly, I advocate for families, supporting them through their journeys and promote equality of services for children with sickle cell and thalassaemia.
