

Dr Sanne Lugthart is a consultant Haematologist working as the Haematology Coordinator Centre lead for the South-West of England. Sanne works in the University Hospital of Bristol and is a member of the Haemoglobinopathy Team. She is specialised in Sickle Cell Disease and is involved in clinical trials in this patient group. Sanne trained in The Netherlands and has worked with Sickle cell patients in the Erasmus MC, Rotterdam. Beside haemoglobinopathy, Sanne is specialised in lymphoma and acute leukaemia. She is a member of the National CAR-T Cell Panel and treats high-risk lymphoma patients. Sanne has completed a PhD in acute myeloid leukaemia and worked in various major centres; St Jude Children's Research Hospital, TN; Cornell Medical College, NY; Ulm University, Germany. Sanne would like to continue to be involved in research and is always happy to collaborate. The NHS is a beautiful example of how to deliver healthcare in an evidence-based way.